The 2022 Active Shooter Threat Landscape: Risks And Resources

We are in, and will likely remain in an exceptionally complex and dynamic threat environment. The pandemic and a variety of socio-economic stressors have served to amplify a number of operational risks, including the active shooter threat. Despite the initial lockdown response to COVID-19, the number of active shooter incidents climb 20% in 2020 and is already 20% higher again for 2021. The record-high number of attacks continues a disturbing and dangerous decades-long upward trend.

The perfect storm of active shooter risk is brewing and 2022 will present a unique confluence of factors that will escalate this risk. This webinar will describe the threat landscape and present Everbridge solutions for active shooter emergencies.
